Second in a series on Shelton's debate to go smoke-free

By Julie Shukla
Staff Writer

Recently, the Alabama Clean Indoor Air Act took effect providing "civil fines of $50 for proprietors of places where smoking is illegally allowed and $25 for the smokers themselves," according to an article from the Tuscaloosa News.

The article suggested that the new law is intended to reduce smoking in public places such as schools, hospitals, retail businesses, and other various places. This is the reason Shelton State in particular is becoming stricter on their smoking policy; perhaps they eventually hope to have a smoke-free campus altogether.

This of course will be a

The announcement of the inaugural mascot try-out and Name-the-Mascot contest met with much enthusiasm from the student body.

Five students signed up to go through the interview and try-out process in hopes of being selected as our first mascot and approximately 25 names were submitted to the Courier for consideration in the naming contest.

From those 25, three choices were given for a vote and the overwhelming choice of the students was Captain Buckingham; it seems he will be known as Captain Buc for short. Stephanie Freeman, a freshman from Tuscaloosa, who submitted Captain Buckingham, and Caleb Hill, a sophomore from Northport, who submitted Captain Buc, were the winners.

The five contestants to be the first Captain buc went through an interview on Monday and then performed a three-minute skit in front of the student body and two judges on Tuesday.

The interview portion accounted for 35 percent of their score, while the skit scoring was divided into the categories of creativity, enthusiasm, crowd appeal and prop usage for the remaining 65 percent.

One minute of the three-minute skit was required to be the new Shelton State Fight song titled "Hey, Hey, Shelton State." The atrium was filled with students, including the Shelton State cheerleaders, dance team, and athletes while on-lookers crowded the second and third floor balconies to watch each performance.

The judges' decision was announced and Shane Cook, a graduate of Tuscaloosa County High and a Shelton State sophomore, was named the first Captain Buckingham.

Look for Captain Buc at upcoming athletic events and other college functions.

Fun all begins with a silent auction.

You can get almost anything you want at the silent auction outside Shelton's restaurant.

A record crowd of some 350 Shelton supporters turned out Thursday evening, Sept. 18, for the college's unique, annual party.

Billed "Bar-B-Que Bash 2003," the 16th annual (or so) event once again featured a tasty snack of pulled pork and trimmings followed by a main course of semi-serious bingo.

Keeping the proceeding from getting too somber was the man referred to in the Tuscaloosa News as the "world's best bingo caller"-Tommy Hester. The NBC bank boss once again kept the crowd loose and howling through games $50-500.

But as the attendees well know, the fun doesn't begin at 7 with bingo or even 6 p.m. with the food. The silent auction is an annual favorite, as well. Items bid upon this year ranged from jewelry and paintings, to rounds of golf at both Ol' Colony and NorthRiver golf clubs and two 1989 autos, a Honda Accord and Crown Victoria. "Chef for a night" with Shelton's Neil Ravenna went for a hefty tag in the $200 range.

Of course bidders, no matter the price tag, pay happily because all proceeds from the event go to the Shelton Foundation's scholarship fund.

Off the Shelf...

By Glen Johnson

Matthew Pearl's first book The Dante Club sounds promising when you scan the fly leaf. It's 1865, and the Boston literary world (quite the self-contained little world in 1865) is all aflutter over the prospect of a new and unique book of poetry.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, the preeminent popular American poet at the moment (and apparently progenitor of all old tweed-bags everywhere, who whenever complimented on any of his poems gives the standard reply through a beatific smile "Oh, yes. That was President Lincoln's favorite poem. He told himself. He used to resite it from memory.") is about to publish his translation of Dante's The Divine Comedy. This is the first time Dante's work has been rendered into English (at least in America) and as mentioned earlier the poets and writers of Boston are beside themselves with anticipation.

But not everyone is viewing this momentous event in a positive light. Dr. Augustus Manning, professor of classical languages at Harvard as well as treasurer of the school's corporation, is aghast at the prospect. Viewing Italian, as well as all the other modern Romance languages for that matter, as degenerate children of noble Latin, he is joined in his protestations by a coterie of Boston Brahmins who see this elevated regard for the Italian language as an evil example to set before the immigrants who now are flooding into Boston and threatening to crowd the old families out. Never mind the fact that a sizable percentage of these immigrants can already read Mr. Dante's poetry in the original.

Arsenic promises to be a rollicking good time

A sip of wine, a splash of murder and tons of laughs make the perfect combination for an evening with the Brewster sisters in Theatre Tuscaloosa's production of Arsenic and Old Lace.

The show opens Thursday, Oct. 2 at the Bean-Brown Theatre on the campus of Shelton State Community College, 9500 Old Greensboro Road in Tuscaloosa.

Audiences were delightfully surprised when Joseph Kesselring's now-classic farce opened on Broadway in August 1941.

At a time when the New York theatre scene was saturated with of socially-aware dramas, Arsenic and Old Lace was so well received that it ran for over three years before being made into a highly successful Frank Capra film starring Cary Grant.

The Brewster sisters are anxious to help elderly gentlemen find a peaceful and final resting place, so the kindly sisters administer a lethal elderberry wine and bury them in the cellar.

Add to the madcap mix three nephews: one who thinks he's Teddy Roosevelt, one who bears an uncanny resemblance to Boris Karloff and one who's engaged to a minister's daughter.

Toss in a policeman who thinks he's a playwright, sprinkle with a few corpses and you have the ingredients for one of the most hilarious and enduring comedies in American theatre.

Tuscaloosa College and Career Expo Sept. 29

Students from all over the West Alabama area will soon have the opportunity to explore the countless college and career options available to them at the Tuscaloosa College and Career Expo 2003.

Shelton State Community College and The University of Alabama, in conjunction with the Tuscaloosa City and County School Systems will host this interactive and informative fair for all area high school seniors on Monday, Sept. 29 from 8:30 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. in the Umphrey Center on Shelton State's Martin Campus and the Coleman Coliseum on The University of Alabama Campus.

Students will have the opportunity to speak with representatives from over 100 different colleges and universities throughout the nation during the College Fair portion of the event on The University of Alabama Campus. During their time on the Shelton State campus, students will receive information on their options at Shelton State. Shelton State basically offers two different tracks for students: transfer programs, which prepare students to move into bachelor's degree programs, and career technology programs, which prepare students to work immediately after graduation.

In addition to providing area seniors with general information about Shelton State, each of Shelton State's 20 Career Technology divisions will host an informational booth complete with representation from over 30 businesses and industries from the West Alabama community.

This combination will give students the opportunity to explore career options and investigate the training needed to obtain their career goals.

"Our career technology programs train students for specific careers. When they come here, they spend time in classrooms that mirror the workplace, working on real-world projects, with instructors who have real experience in those areas.

Training is available for those with nearly any interest, from cosmetology to welding," said Steve Fair, Acting Associate Dean of Career Technology Services.

"The workforce is continuing to grow and change on a daily basis. Our desire is for the students of West Alabama to be well prepared to step into a rewarding career.

Shelton State's Career Technology programs offer the latest training on state of the art equipment and the Career Expo is a great way to introduce them to what we have to offer," said Rick Rogers, president.

"We are certainly fortunate to have such a wonderful working relationship with The University of Alabama. The cooperation between the two schools and with the local school systems allows area students to be exposed to many college and career options early on in their decision making process. This type of exposure and knowledge of their opportunities really helps students to make their decisions on higher education," Rogers added.

"Cyber Cafe" coming soon

Chuck Boening is looking for people to give him a hand (or two) in naming the new cyber cafe that will be located in room 2413.

Shelton State is planning to open a cyber cafe on the second floor by the end of October. According to Chuck Boening, library systems officer and history instructor, the cafe will contain approximately 12 computers where students can take advantage of the word processing programs, get on the Internet or just listen to music. Boening also explained that Neil Ravenna, instructor of the commercial foods program and director of food service, will provide food and Buffalo Rock will provide drinks. The plan for the types of food provided will be items which are unavailable on the rest of the campus: such as pastries, muffins, and flavored coffees. Boening explained that students will also be able to bring in their own food. So far in the plans, the only cost to students other than food and drinks will be 10 cents a page for printing.

Students! Alumni! Lend us your ideas and win a $100 gift certificate to the Shelton State Bookstore!

Shelton State Community College is looking for a name for our new Cyber Café, coming soon to Shelton State's Martin Campus, and we need your help. Give us your suggestion for the new name and if we choose your entry, you will receive a $100 gift certificate to the Shelton State Bookstore to spend on anything you want! It's just that simple.

You may give us your entry in one of two ways: 1) You can go to <http://www.sheltonstate.edu/library> and click on the "Cyber Café Naming Contest" link, then e-mail the required information - name, status (i.e. Student or Alumnus), phone number, alternate contact information (e-mail address, home address, other phone number, etc.) and your suggested Cyber Café name - to cboening@sheltonstate.edu Or, 2) complete the form below and drop it in the "Cyber Café Naming Contest" box at the Circulation Desk at either the Shelton State Library on the Martin Campus or the Fredd Campus Library on the C.A. Fredd Campus. All entries must be received by Midnight, Oct. 15, 2003.

Entries will be accepted until Midnight, October 15, 2003. Any entry received physically or by e-mail after that date and time will not be considered. A complete entry shall consist of the following information:

- A. Contestant name
- B. Contestant status (i.e. Student, Alumnus)
- C. Contestant phone number
- D. Alternate contact information (e-mail address, home address, alternate phone number, etc.)
- E. Contestant's choice for Cyber Cafe name.

Incomplete entries will be discarded and will NOT be considered.

All entries shall be judged by a committee of Shelton State faculty and staff. If more than one person suggests the name that is chosen by the Committee, all names submitting the chosen entry will be drawn from, at random, to determine the winner of the $100 gift certificate. This contest is open only to Shelton State students and alumni. All decisions are final and the winner may make no future claims on the selected name.

Show off your stuff

It's not too early to be thinking about your submissions to this year's Maxwell's Crossing, the Shelton

State Courier's annual creative issue featuring fiction, poetry, artwork, photographs, and all things creative.

Diary of a soccer season

By K.A. West

With 11 games remaining, the Shelton State women's soccer team is hitting its stride. After a pair of tough losses at home to Gordon and Darton during the opening week of the season, the Lady Bucs (5-3) have gone 4-1 since August 31 and have outscored their opponents 20-3.

During the run, Shelton State played at Pearl River, a Mississippi powerhouse that handed the Lady Bucs an 8-0 loss last season.

Shelton State returned the favor to the Wildcats by beating them 5-0 on their home field on Sept. 16.

Sophomore forward Megan Young scored her first career hat trick that included a beautiful chip shot over the onrushing Pearl River keeper. Sophomore goalkeeper Teresa Herring recorded her second consecutive shutout.

Freshmen midfielders Maria Lizcano and Erica Glidewell also scored, while freshman Krista McMillan dominated the midfield. Freshman Margaux Edington switched from her normal position at stopper to play marking back and shut down Ashley Chrisman, Pearl River's top scorer.

Shelton State hosts Hinds College on Sept. 22 at 2 p.m. in a matchup that could be repeated at the region tournament in November.

The Lady Eagles went 17-1 last year and beat the Lady Bucs 6-0 en route to their fifth straight state (Miss.) and region 23 championships.

Shelton State plays its next three games on the road and won't play again at home until Oct. 8, against Mississippi Gulf Coast at 1 p.m.

On the road with the Shelton State soccer team:

On Sept. 7, the team embarked on our first road trip of the season to play at Andrew College in Cuthbert, Ga.

Sunday, 11 a.m. - I arrive at the campus in a record 13 minutes, despite being stuck behind the world's slowest BMW driver. I'm the last one on the bus - I had forgotten about the first-come, first-serve policy for good bus seats.

And pulling seniority is out of the question, especially since the freshmen outnumber the sophomores.

11:15 a.m. - Lauren Adair, who is redshirting this season, drops off Sponge Bob Squarepants goody bags for the entire team.

A couple of players polish off everything in the bag before we even leave the parking lot.

11:30 a.m. - As we start to roll out right on schedule, Coach warns us to avoid taking any Dramamine and to let her know when we need a bathroom break.

11:31 a.m. - Bathroom break No. 1.

12:33 p.m. - Like many people on the bus, midfielder Dottie Sloan is already fast asleep. However, she is the only one with her mouth wide open and a shiny blue sleep mask strapped to her face.

1:10 p.m. - Bathroom break No. 2.

1:20 p.m. - First time someone asks, "How much longer?" We've been on the road less than two hours.

1:45 p.m.

- While we were driving through Montgomery, a girl in a blue car pulls up alongside the bus and honks. My seatmate, Dreama Jones, pointed out that the driver is Emily Todd, an Auburn-Montgomery soccer player who went to high school with Lauren and Brooklyn Lewis, a freshman midfielder.

Brooke promptly stuck her head out the window and held a conversation with Emily at the red light. It's a small world...

2:35 p.m. - Bathroom break No. 3. After several players have already stamped off the bus, we realize that the gas station is closed.

One of the freshmen looks kind of sick, so I'm hoping there's another station nearby.

3:05 p.m. - Bathroom break No. 3, part two. Where I come from, you can't go more than a mile without passing either a gas station or a church.

4:43 p.m. ET - We arrive at Andrew College with plenty of time until the game starts at 7 p.m. ET. After already watching Remember the Titans and the tape of the game we won against AC last Sunday, we watched some footage of the U.S. women's

6 p.m. ET - The field seems to have extra width, but shorter length than most fields. The grass is very thick, so unless the ball was kicked hard ("with good pace"), it would roll several feet and just stop.

7 p.m.-9 p.m. ET - We probably played our worst first half this season. The weather was nice and cool, but we didn't adjust to the field or gain possession enough, which we call "winning the 50/50 balls." Coach was not pleased, and she let us know it during half-time.

So in the second half, the team stepped it up and got a couple of goals, a yellow card and a lot of motivation for next year's match-ups with Andrew after losing at their place 5-2.

9:35 p.m. - All 26 of us invade either McDonald's or Subway in some place called Union Springs. The Subway lady saw us coming and turned off the sign light as if the store was closing, but Coach hops off the bus and walks in, anyway. Turns out the store doesn't close until 10 p.m.

10:05 p.m. - As we wait for the bus, a few players swap beauty pageant stories. That's a step up from our usual bathroom topics.

10:10 p.m. - We hit the highway again and finish off two comedies, plus half of Top Gun.

By this time, most of the team is wishing they'd brought blankets. The chilliness is much better than no air conditioning at all, which is what happened to us during one trip last season.

Monday, 1:30 a.m. - Our first road trip is officially over. Good news: Coach gives us the day off from practice.

Bad news: Classes start in six hours.

Micheal Carr reminisces in his theatre department office.

Third in a series of interviews with the people who make Shelton the community college of the arts in Alabama

Interviewed
By Alaine
Huntington
staff writer

Michael Carr, born in Sunderland, England, immigrated to the U.S. in 1978, with his parents.

A man who always looks towards the future, Carr said he has enjoyed being in the performing arts for 25 years. Carr has been at Shelton since May of 1997 and according to Lisa Bordelon, "Michael broadens your horizons, and tries to make you the best actor he knows you can be."

Unknown to many, Carr was a successful hairstylist, owning his own salon, "Michaels" in Tuscaloosa, for nine years.

"Hairstyling gave me the best of both worlds, I was able to act and make money cutting hair."

His favorite occupation, before becoming an acting teacher, was his job as a merchandise stocker.

"I can't have back the freedom of youth and working a nine to three job was a fun period in my life."

Carr obtained his baccalaureate of arts degree, in theatre, in 1991 at the University of Alabama.

Carr in 1997, received his master of fine arts, in directing, at U.A.

The Courier has managed to interview the industrious Carr in his office on one of his normal busy days.

What caused you to become an acting teacher?

Theatre itself. Teaching was part of the job. Teaching is "not my calling, but is part of my larger plan."

We have heard you speak highly of your acting students. What qualities do you find most admirable in them?

Their commitment, basic discipline, to show up, suit up, do what they are supposed to do and make it look good. It is rare to find students actually driven towards teaching or performing.

Do you think there is a more stable life in being an acting teacher or a performer?

There isn't a high demand for drama teachers, if you were an English teacher who also taught drama, then you might get somewhere. Finding a job teaching is much harder than performing.

Did you ever want to become a professional performer?

The idea was appealing; I was driven towards the more organizational aspects of it and didn't feel the need to perform.

Acting was a hobby and it was fun to do, but I enjoy directing so much more.

I've been a professional performer in 12 plays that varied from touring shows to small parts in regional theatre, nothing really to write home about. No commercials.

I could've made a living at it, I just wasn't wanting to accept the lifestyle. I've never stopped participating in shows, every year I have done at least two.

What is the relationship between Theatre Tuscaloosa and the Shelton State Theatre Department?

In 1978 T/T and Shelton State Community College formed a partnership; SSCC hired a theatre faculty member who taught theatre and served as artistic director for T/T.

Theatre students assisted at T/T receiving hands on training in theatre production. Because there wasn't a theatre at the old Shelton campus all performances were held at the Bama theatre.

Over the next 20 years TT and SSCC grew resulting in the construction of the Bean Brown Theatre. With the opening of the Martin campus the two organizations were finally under the same roof.

All T/T productions were now performed at the Bean Brown Theatre and the Theatre Department season was initiated. Over the past six years SSTD has produced two shows a year specifically for Shelton students, staff and faculty. T/T continues to produce five main stage shows each year along with numerous special events typified by the Alabama Stage and Screen Hall of Fame Gala, held annually on the second Saturday of March.

Has becoming the artistic director of Theatre Tuscaloosa as well the theatre department chairman placed more pressure upon you?

No. I love it. Being the full time chairman, I am responsible for two organizations, but on the other hand it is just one organization.

It is my job to know when the two are symbiotic, and the different needs compliment each other. I enjoy the responsibility.

What is life like for Michael Carr, from a professional perspective?

I teach acting techniques one and two, theatre appreciation, stage make up and I teach individual studies.

I also develop outreach and educational programs as well as being a recruiter for prospective students who plan to major in theatre.

For Theatre Tuscaloosa, I work with three colleagues and I'm responsible for total theatre operations for the Bean Brown Theatre, which is a $4.5 million facility. We produce 15 to 20 events per season for an audience of over 25,000 patrons.

Do you have any advice for any aspiring actors or students in general?

If you wish to be an actor get in community theatre. There are always opportunities in music videos, cable television, theme parks, among others.

Hone your own skills. Don't wait for someone else to come along and tell you that you have talent. It's all about performing.

You have to test whether acting is the thing for you. If you want to act, audition.

A serious actor has to be ready to work whenever an opportunity arises. Don't worry about the mold.

There is no mold, you have to have drive and passion, you have to have something the public wants.

Always try hard in everything you do, don't play around because there is always someone around the corner ready to eat you alive.

long process because according to Steve Averett, head of maintenance, Humphrey Lee, Dean of Students, is only at the starting point by taking surveys from other schools to see how they are going about developing a smoke-free campus.

Besides the act that was passed, there are several other reasons the staff at Shelton is pushing for this idea.

According to the site casacolumbia.org, "almost one-fourth of college students smoke cigarettes, more than half on a daily basis", therefore, "smoke-free campuses can be a powerful tool in the ongoing effort to encourage healthy lifestyles."

Considering, smoke-freecampus.org suggests that it is easy for students who are occasional smokers to become addicted in an atmosphere that allows smoking freely.

The question many might ask is, what would a smoke-free campus require? According to casacolumbia.org, smoking would be prohibited in all areas and would apply fairly to students, faculty, and staff.

Also, the site believes that enforcement shouldn't be too harsh, but it should involve security to guarantee compliance, and if a penalty is part of the policy, it should be reasonable.

As of right now, Shelton doesn't have a penalty. Students seem to have mixed views about the whole item. Some think it's a great idea to have a smoke-free campus, some hate the idea, while others don't have an opinion, but wonder if it would ever really work.

"It would make the school cleaner and nicer, but it doesn't seem possible because there are too many smokers. Having designated spots seems like the only answer," said sophomore Meaghan Hall.

The staff at Shelton is considering all the arguments by putting much emphasis on studying and reviewing what other schools are doing to see what will work best.

They also believe that feedback from the students will be helpful in making the decision as well.

According to casacolumbia.org, one midwestern university examined the topic of smoking on campus, and they decided to first maintain designated areas for smokers, and after two years, they would review the regulations to decide whether they should become totally smoke-free.

This is an approach Shelton could possibly take.

The goal is to decide whether or not a smoke-free campus will work, and if it is possible, there needs to be a way to maintain the policy. Of course, it would be the responsibility of everyone to comply with whatever decision is made.

Ultimately, Shelton desires to go in a direction that will benefit the students and school.
